

I. Background:

Since 2009, Clean Air Network's (CAN's) mission is to strive to improve Hong Kong's air quality to benefit public health and mitigate climate change through our three key pillars of work, including advocacy, empowerment, and knowledge. The Air quality research Intern will focus on environmental health and policy analysis, particularly in indoor air quality (IAQ) policies.

II. Responsibilities:

- Conduct desktop research on indoor air quality policies and regulations in Hong Kong, as well as international best practices.
- Gather information on local building health standards, air quality index, and existing initiatives related to indoor air quality improvement.
- Analyze how indoor air quality initiatives can contribute to Hong Kong's 2050 carbon neutrality goal.
- Synthesize research findings into comprehensive reports, summaries, and presentations.
- Assist in the development of new concepts and projects based on research outcomes.
- Collaborate with the team to identify potential strategies and interventions to improve indoor air quality in Hong Kong.

III. Qualifications:

- Current enrolment in a college or university program, preferably pursuing a degree in environmental science, public health, policy studies, or a related discipline.
- Demonstrated interest in environmental health, policy analysis, and sustainability.
- Strong research skills with the ability to conduct thorough desktop research and analyze complex information.
- Excellent written and verbal communication skills.
- Ability to work independently and collaboratively in a dynamic team environment.
- Knowledge of Hong Kong's environmental policies and initiatives is advantageous but not required.

IV. Duration and Compensation:

- The internship duration is 2-3 months.
- This is a paid internship opportunity with compensation provided for the duration of the internship.
